Ken Taylor photograph collection

N-2017-003

This accession consists of 200 photographs (colour slides) taken by Ken Taylor while he was working on a land use mapping project for Environment Canada. The images depict human impacts on the landscape, such as seismic lines, mine sites, and dams, as well as communities including Yellowknife, Rae (Behchoko), Fort Providence, Hay River, Fort Smith, Fort Resolution, Fort Simpson, Norman Wells, Fort Norman (Tulita), and Inuvik.

Ken Taylor holds an undergraduate degree in the history of northern Canada from Queen's University. In 1971, he earned a Master's degree in Biogeography from the University of Alberta, studying the revegetation of the Discovery Mine site. From 1970 to 1979, Mr. Taylor worked as a project manager on the Land Use Information Map project. In the course of this work he travelled to communities in the NWT, as well as accompanying the wildlife survey biologist on some aerial surveys, and took many photographs. In 1979, he transferred to the Polar Gas pipeline project, and participated in aerial reconnaissance of the proposed pipeline routes.

Mr. Taylor donated these slides to the NWT Archives in 2015.
